the pastors of the different churches in the town asking the company to consent to having prayer-meetings held in their proposal caused considerable feeling among the members, who expressed them-

The Glen Ridge Club House.

Early last fall the plans of several gentlemen of Glen Ridge to form a social club took shape and such an organization was formed, with a number of the prominent citizens of Glen Ridge and Bloomfield as members. This association was incorporated under the name of the Glen Ridge Club. The next thing to do was to erect a suitable Club House. For this purpose the Glen Ridge Building Association was formed and incorporated, the stock being taken by about a dozen of the gentlemen identified with the Club.

A suitable lot was purchased on Ridgewood avenue, plans were prepared by W. C. Hazlett, a well-known architect of New York, and the contract for the house was given to Mr. J. H. Lockwood, of Montclair. Though from various causes the completion of the building has been delayed to a period much later than was expected, there is an end to house building as to other things, and on Saturday last the Club House was thrown open to its members. If before that time there had been a disposition on the part of any to cavil at the delay, it vanished when they saw the beauty of the completed house, as it appeared brilliantly lighted on Saturday night.

It is hard to know where to begin a description of such a perfect whole. From the entrance hall to the billiard room the interior is so deftly and tastefully united that it is difficult to treat it as a thing of parts. The hall is a room about sixteen feet square, wainscoted and trimmed in California redwood, with hard-wood floors and heavy mahogany furniture. Opening off this hall on the right, and separated from it by heavy plush portieres, is the reading room of the Club, with its paper files and handsome cherry pamphlet case and reading table. This room is handsomer finished in butternut, and at one end has a wide tiled fireplace and high mantel extending nearly across the room.
At the other end is the large bow window which is so noticeable a feature of the exterior and from which a fine view up and down Ridgewood avenue is obtainable, as well as of the handsome residences opposite. In this room are to be found the principal English and American periodicals and a judicious selection of American and foreign newspapers. The furniture of the room is natural cherry, upholstered in leather, and the exceedingly tasteful gas fixtures and hearth furniture are in old silver.

Crossing the hall to the rear of the house you enter the smoking and writing room of the Club. In this room is to be seen a mantel and fireplace which, while unpretentious, has few equals for beauty. It is made of natural pine with a face and hearth of two shades of yellow tiles. Here also hangs the bulletin board upon which the names of proposed members are posted and to which the members go for all club news. In the rear of the hall on the left are the coat and toilet rooms of the Club. Leaving the central part of the east side of the hall is the staircase leading to the billiard and card rooms in the second story. This stairway is of redwood and separated from the hall by a screen of the same wood.
At the head of the stairs on the right is the large billiard room of the Club, a room about thirty-five feet long and eighteen to twenty wide. The room has an arched ceiling and is wainscoted in ash to the spring of the arch, a height of about eight feet. In this room are a billiard table and a pool table, both made expressly for the Club by the Brunswick, Balke & Callender Co., which in finish and perfection are not to be surpassed.
At one end of the billiard room, separated by heavy portieres, is the card room, finished in cherry and furnished with handsome card tables and chairs. The floors throughout the house are of hard wood and the mantels specially designed by the architect. The furniture has been selected by a committee appointed for that purpose and is handsome and substantial through the whole building.

The living rooms for the custodian and his family are in the rear and furnished with separate stairs and exits, so that they are completely shut off from the Club rooms. In the whole building is apparent not only the skill of the designer but an exact knowledge of their needs by the owners and a desire on the part of the builder to supply them and to do it well.

The Club numbers now about fifty members. A number of applications are still pending, and the Club is in a prosperous condition in all respects.

The opening of the Club has stimulated the interest which all of its members take, and the pride that all feel in their beautiful house may be relied upon to keep that interest from flagging. During the season the Club propose to give a series of receptions and entertainments, among which will be private theatricals, musical and dancing parties.

The Club House is thrown open on their non-resident guests, to enable them to share the advantages of the reading room and the Club House in which they have taken so generous an interest.

It is the intention of the Club at an early day to erect a bowling alley on the rear of their lot, which will also be open to ladies.

The opening reception of the Club will be given on next Wednesday evening, at which it is expected that all members will be present with their families and a number of non-resident guests.

Montclair Memoranda.

The first fire of the year occurred on Saturday last, at about 6 P. M., in a building at the end of Fullerton avenue extension. On the way to the fire, Assistant Foreman Brooks fell and was run over by the jumper and quite seriously hurt. The department did good service at the fire.

—Mr. Hugh Gallagher, one of the committee of the Montclair branch of the Parnell League, announces that the net receipts of the meeting held a few days ago in the skating rink amount to $247, and a check for that amount has been forwarded to the gentlemen who have charge of the fund.

—The "elite of Montclair" engaged the skating rink for Friday evening for a reception and ball. It was a brilliant affair.

—A concert for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. of this place took place in the Congregational church on Friday evening.
Prof. George W. Morgan and Miss Maud Morgan assisted by vocal and violin soloists, furnished the entertainment.

—Montclair is agitated at present over the question of a water supply. It may go far before getting a supply of as fine water as is furnished to Bloomfield.

—A large number of buildings are to be erected in Montclair in the coming.
The demand for houses continues good and the prices steady.

State and County Pickings.

The National Hall building in East Orange with its contents, was destroyed by fire on Thursday morning.

The members of Hugh DePayen Commandery, Jersey City, have started to raise money to build a Masonic temple with a hall large enough for a drill-room. The subscriptions already amount to over $10-000. There are over 10,000 masons in this city and vicinity.

The Government Fortification Board in its last report calls attention to the valuable site for a fort at Red Bank, which was purchased in 1877. There are 100 acres embraced in the tract, which stands on a bluff commanding the channel at short range.

The Junior Class of Princeton College has followed the lead of the Seniors and resolved that it recognizes in the practice of hazing something which is degrading in itself and below the dignity of college men. They request the Sophomores and Freshmen to join with them in condemning it.

The bill to extend the jurisdiction of District Courts throughout the county has become a law.

A meeting of Orange Prohibitionists was recently held at the rooms of the W. C. T. U. Representatives from all the Oranges were present and arrangements made for the spring campaign.

McClellan Post Office, in West Orange was opened for business on Feb. 1st. It is on the Valley Road, opposite St. Marks.

The temperance people of Cedarville, Cumberland county, have taken hold of the liquor question in a business-like way.
They are about to purchase the hotel property in the place for the purpose of running it as a temperance house.

The proprietors of the three hotels of Bridgeton have given notice that on the expiration of their liquor licenses on the 18th inst., they will close their establishments. The prohibition sentiment has been growing so strong in that city and the hotel men have had so much difficulty that they have decided to go out of business. Jackson Briant, owner of the Davis House, the leading hotel, has sold it to William G. Nixon. It will probably be replaced with business houses.

The members of Ashland Hook and Ladder Company of East Orange are at present in a great state of uneasiness over what is expected to take place at their next regular meeting. The company is composed of about forty men, all supposed to be active members, but of this number only about ten attend the fires that occur in the township. The remaining thirty members are all well-to-do business men, and by virtue of being members of the fire department are allowed a reduction on their taxes by the Township Committee of $500. The members who claim to do all the work of the department are going to either have the reductions of taxes suspended or the inactive members expelled from the fire department.

The American Insurance Company elected the following directors on Monday, Frederick H. Harris, Edward G.
Faitoute, Benjamin F. Crane and George W. Ketcham.

Several engineers of the D. L. & W. R.
R. were present at the revival meeting at the Roseville M. E. church on Wednesday.

Freedom for Ireland.

To The Citizens:

"D" wishes to know does O'Donovan Rossa spell his name with Mc. It matters not how Rossa spells his name. England made him what he is, and now she must make the best of it. When England had Rossa chained like a wild beast in the dark cells of Millbank and Portland prisons, she was sowing the seeds of the dreadful dynamite policy she now dreads so much.

"D" says life is too short to teach "McC" the whole history of Ireland.
"D" should not get discouraged, as it is never too late to learn. Cato, at eighty years of age, learned the Greek language.
Plutarch, when between seventy and eighty, began the study of Latin, and many others commenced new studies at an advanced age. I am not over forty years and am willing to take lessons in Irish history from "D" at any time. I have read John Mitchell's History of Ireland, also M. P. Haverly's History, which is considered as good as any published, and I have come to the conclusion that Ireland can never be contented as long as England holds her by brute force. History tells us that whenever a ray of hope lit up the horizon of Ireland's political gloom, there were England's political parties, be they Whigs or Tories, ready to spring on that unhappy country and tear from her every vestige of right that she should enjoy. For hundreds of years has Ireland groaned under this oppression. Oh God, it is long enough! Yet it was but last week that Lord Salisbury and his party were forging new coercion chains to bind the hands of Irishmen tighter, in order, if possible, to secure them forever as serfs to English aristocracy, and bondsmen for the British crown. Irishmen will no longer submit to such galling degradation. The spirit of Grattan is again awake in that country, and its people must be free.

THE DEATH OF GENERAL HANCOCK.

No soldier on either side of the late great conflict of arms commanded more fully the admiration and love of his fellow-countrymen than he who entered into rest at Governor's Island yesterday. In the long line of heroes who joined the victor and attractiveness of private life with the front of Mars and the very genius of war the name of Winfield S. Hancock must ever stand preminent. Although it was not his fortune to be intrusted with an independent command, his qualities were of that kind that signalized him as the Marshal Ney of every eu-gagement, the "bravest of the brave." From the first campaign of the Army of the Potomac to its crowning triumph his crest was in the thickest of the fight, a signal for daring deeds and an inspiration of victory.
Noble heart, true soul, thy life has been a precious heritage to the land of thy birth and all to the generation that shall follow thee!

It would be a work of repetition and super-erogation to recall the chief incidents in General Hancock's military career. These are impressed upon our history in un fading colors. He was a soldier both born and made. The training he received at West Point and in the skirmishes of Mexico—we have General Grant's authority for calling that war a series of skirmishes—was impressed upon a natural bent and aptitude for military life amounting to greatness—an aptitude which needed only a fit occasion to attract the attention of the world. Fortune threw many such occasions in his way, and upon each of these the inborn fire of the true soldier became a conspicuous beacon on the battlefield. The presence of danger was his inspiration, and his inspiration, like that of every great captain, was transfused through his whole command, so that every man's utmost fighting powers were brought to play at the decisive moment. No more can be said of any soldier of ancient or modern times whose command was subordinate to the direction of an other mind—N. Y.
Evening Post.
